

INFORMATION SHEET – Online survey

PROJECT TITLE: Stroke survivors' perspectives: defining a sufficiently important difference in functional outcome after stroke rehabilitation.

You are invited to participate in our research project for stroke survivors. The aim is to learn what factors are important to stroke survivors when making decisions about taking medications, specifically when it comes to medications that might increase physical recovery when doing physical rehabilitation.

This study is being conducted by Nerida Firth, and will contribute to the Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) at James Cook University.

Participation in this study involves completing an online survey where you will respond to questions about medications that might improve recovery whilst undertaking physical rehabilitation.

This survey should take approximately 30 minutes to complete.

Taking part in this survey is voluntary. You will not be asked for any personal information that can lead to your identification. Therefore, your responses gathered in the survey will be strictly anonymous. There are no risks associated with being involved in this survey.

The data from the study will be published in a research journal and potentially presented at conferences. As your responses in this survey are non-identifiable, you will not be identified in any way in these publications or presentations.

If you have any questions about the study, please contact Nerida Firth or Ruth Barker.
